

Code of Ethics

NEMRA encourages its members to refrain from:

- Willfully inducing a principal company to break its contractual relationship with another representative;
- Willfully inducing an employee of another representative to breach his/her employment relationship with his or her employer;
- Suggesting or agreeing to divide commissions with customers or those representing other than the representatives' own principals;
- Slandering or libeling another representative, or impugning his intentions, motives or actions;
- Betraying the confidence of other representatives or customers or principals